FROM OUR PASTOR, FATHER AMATO

There is always a certain relief when the rose vestments come out for the 4th Sunday of Lent (Laetare Sunday; and for the 3rd Sunday of Advent, Gaudete Sunday) because it signals to us that something different is about to happen, the penances we have undertaken are almost completed. We have now entered the season formerly known as 'Passiontide,' the last two weeks of Lent.

Before I get to that, I want to first express my profound gratitude for all who helped prepare our 3rd Annual St. Joseph's Table celebration. It takes a lot of work to pull all of that together. The food is always amazing, the music is great, and all the people who come have a wonderful time. We always have a lot to do during Lent, with our consistent practice of the Stations of the Cross with soup suppers, and other Lenten activities, but I appreciate people going out of their way to make the celebration of St. Joseph something special for our parish and community.

This weekend marks the beginning of the last third of the Lenten Season. You have probably been experiencing the difficulty of keeping your Lenten disciplines that you have chosen, and perhaps you have even given in a little bit. I want to encourage you to persevere in your Lenten discipline, knowing how joyous it will be on Easter to complete the challenge that we have set for this season. The goal is to come out better, more disciplined and virtuous (and prayerful), than when we started Lent. Even if we grew in our practice of the Faith in just the slightest way, that is a victory. The finish line is near. Like being in a race, when we see the finish line, we should have new strength and determination. We sprint to the finish line in anticipation of the joy that will follow.

We rely on images and statues to help us in our prayer as they provoke our imagination and emotions. However, during these last two weeks the statues, images, and crucifix are veiled with a purple cloth. There are several ways this practice developed over the course of the centuries, but the Gospel that was formerly read on this Fifth Sunday was from John 8:46-59, which concludes with the line, "They therefore took up stones to cast at Him; but Jesus hid Himself, and went out from the temple." The Gospel throughout the following week leading up to Palm Sunday showed the increasing tensions between Christ and the authorities. So with the veiling of the statues, we enter into that mystery of our Lord hiding Himself until the appointed time for His arrest.

We live in a body that is reliant on the senses for information. When something that is normally there suddenly goes missing, we notice. The fact that the statues and images are veiled is itself information that we must interpret and understand. Part of the idea of veiling the statues, besides the scriptural reference I gave above, is to remind us that we live in a veiled world. We will only see the full reality of things when the veil is lifted, at the end, and all is revealed. This is possible because of Christ's Resurrection. We also look to the familiar comforts of the statues and images and, seeing them veiled, realize a sense of loss, until the glory of Easter is upon us and we again rejoice, surrounded by the full beauty of our churches.

In Christ,

Father Amato
