PLEASE SEE INSIDE FOR MASS TIMES

FROM OUR PASTOR, FATHER AMATO

To continue the discussion from last week, regarding the direction the priest is facing at the altar, we should go deeper into the particular direction the priest faces. Again, whether you can see the face of the priest (the priest faces the opposite direction of the people), or you cannot see the priest's face (he faces the same, common direction as the people), we are oriented toward the Lord. This is why a crucifix can be placed on the altar regardless of which direction the priest faces.

Notice the word "oriented" as I mentioned facing toward the Lord. You may notice the word "orient" relates to the East. We use this word all the time in various contexts. When someone has lost his way and is directionless, we say he is "dis-oriented." We do not literally mean in those circumstances that he faces a direction other than East, and somehow that is a problem for him. But we do use the word "oriented" to mean someone is going in the right direction, as is commonly done.

The liturgical posture with priest and people facing the same, common direction is referred to as ad orientem. This is simply translated as "toward the East." Why does the eastward posture matter and where did this come from?

There are various reasons why one would face east while praying. The Christian practice does not directly derive from the ancient Jewish practice, but there are similarities. For example, the Jews would pray facing the direction of the Temple in Jerusalem. Today, Muslims will pray facing the direction of Mecca. The eastward direction has a particular importance for Christians in that Christ is the Light of the World, and the sun rises from the east. Every morning is the expectation of the coming return of the Son of God. Facing such a direction also expresses the universality of God in that Jesus came to save us all, just as the sun shines on all every day.

In the following lengthy quotation from St. John of Damascus (d. 749), he gives us many reasons for facing eastward (with some edited for space):

"It is not without reason or by chance that we worship towards the East. But seeing that we are composed of a visible and an invisible nature, that is to say, of a nature partly of spirit and partly of sense, we render also a twofold worship to the Creator.... Since, therefore, God is spiritual light, and Christ is called in the Scriptures Sun of Righteousness and Dayspring, the East is the direction that must be assigned to His worship. For everything good must be assigned to Him from Whom every good thing arises.... Moreover, the Scripture also says, And God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there He put the man whom He had formed: and when he had transgressed His command, He expelled him and made him to dwell over against the delights of Paradise, which clearly is the West. So, then, we worship God seeking and striving after our old fatherland. Moreover, the tent of Moses had its veil and mercy seat towards the East. Also, the tribe of Judah as the most precious pitched their camp on the East. Also, in the celebrated temple of Solomon, the Gate of the Lord was placed eastward. Moreover Christ, when He hung on the Cross, had His face turned towards the West, and so we worship, striving after Him. And when He was received again into Heaven He was borne towards the East, and thus His apostles worship Him, and thus He will come again in the way in which they beheld Him going towards Heaven; as the Lord Himself said, As the lightning cometh out of the East and shineth even unto the West, so also shall the coming of the Son of Man be. So, then, in expectation of His coming we worship towards the East. But this tradition of the apostles is unwritten. For much that has been handed down to us by tradition is unwritten."

I italicized those few sections, in particular, to show the connection between the eastward direction and the sense of striving or journeying towards our Lord in the expectation of His coming in glory. Even if a church is not literally built along an east-west axis, nevertheless, within the context of the Mass, there should be a clear orientation towards the Lord. There is so much more to discuss on this topic, theologically and historically, and I can give some good resources if anyone is interested.

The Season of Advent is upon us and it is a perfect time to recognize again this aspect of striving that is built into our prayer. The altar is the threshold between heaven and earth, where God comes to meet us. I will begin to use this liturgical posture more frequently during the weekday Masses so that the reality of what we celebrate is more clearly manifest as we, together, await the coming of the Lord.

In Christ,
Father Amato
