FROM OUR PASTOR, FATHER AMATO

This past week, in Rome, the Synod on Synodality began. It has many people asking questions such as: "What is going on?" "What is a synod?" and "Is the Synod changing Church teaching?"

These questions are understandable because there is a considerable amount of confusion, given things that have been said throughout all forms of media, whether the information is fully accurate or not. Most of what I found has been a bit misleading. Journalists and others will take what they want and run with it, creating a perception in people's minds that something really big is about to happen.

It is helpful, first, to know what a synod is. In 1965, Pope Paul VI issued his Apostolic Letter Apostolica sollicitudo which established a Synod of Bishops. In that document he gives the definition of what the Synod is to be: "The Synod of Bishops, whereby bishops chosen from various parts of the world are to offer more effective assistance to the supreme Shepherd, is to be constituted in such a way that it is: a) a central ecclesiastical institution; b) representing the whole Catholic episcopate; c) of its nature perpetual; d) as for structure, carrying out its function for a time and when called upon."

He goes on to describe its functions: "The Synod of Bishops has, of its very nature, the function of providing information and offering advice. It can also enjoy the power of making decisions when such power is conferred upon it by the Roman Pontiff; in this case, it belongs to him to ratify the decisions of the Synod."

1. The general purpose of the Synod are:

- a) to promote a closer union and greater cooperation between the Supreme Pontiff and the bishops of the whole world;
- b) to see to it that accurate and direct information is supplied on matters and situations that bear upon the internal life of the Church and upon the kind of action that should be carrying on in today's world;
- c) to facilitate agreement, at least on essential matters of doctrine and on the course of action to be taken in the life of the Church.

2. Its special and immediate purposes are:

- a) to provide mutually useful information;
- b) to discuss the specific business for which the Synod is called into session on any given occasion."

All of this is codified in the Church's law, canons 342-348. The important thing to note is that the synod does not have any power to bind consciences, as we say. It is merely a consultative body and not a deliberative body. Like any of us, the pope has the right to choose his own advisers and those who inform him.

No matter what any individual bishop says at the synod, or even whatever document the synod produces that is given to the pope, it has no authority other than what the pope gives to it. Usually what happens is that the pope is given a document voted on by the members of the synod. He then takes what he wants from that and issues a Post-synodal Apostolic Exhortation. It is this document that would then be considered part of the ordinary magisterium of the pope.

In the news recently, you may have heard about various dubia which have been submitted by some cardinals and others. A dubium is simply a question that requires a 'yes' ('Affirmative') or 'no' ('Negative') answer. Usually, the answer is given with some further explanation.

For example, on the question of whether the Church can bless same-sex unions, the Congregation (now 'Dicastery') for the Doctrine of the Faith responded to this specific question: "Does the Church have the power to give the blessing to unions of persons of the same sex?" The Answer: "Negative." It then goes on to explain the reasoning. Part of the response explains: "For this reason, it is not licit to impart a blessing on relationships, or partnerships, even stable, that involve sexual activity outside of marriage (i.e., outside the indissoluble union of a man and a woman open in itself to the transmission of life), as is the case of the unions between persons of the same sex [Catechism of the Catholic Church, 2357]. The presence in such relationships of positive elements, which are in themselves to be valued and appreciated, cannot justify these relationships and render them legitimate objects of an ecclesial blessing, since the positive elements exist within the context of a union not ordered to the Creator's plan." The brief document is worth reading and can be found here:

<https://press.vatican.va/content/salastampa/en/bollettino/pubblico/2021/03/15/210315b.html>. This was not merely a response from the Dicastery, but the pope himself approved the content and gave his assent to its publication.

Finally, another concern is that Pope Francis could allow for the ordination of women to the priesthood, in contradiction to the definitive teaching of Pope John Paul II in Ordinatio sacerdotalis. Yet, it was not John Paul II or even Benedict XVI who made it a canonical crime to ordain a woman to the priesthood. It was Pope Francis who added that to canon law in 2021. Here is Canon 1379, §3: "Both a person who attempts to confer a sacred order [diaconate, presbyterate, or episcopal] on a woman, and the woman who attempts to receive the sacred order, incur a latae sententiae [automatic] excommunication reserved to the Apostolic See; a cleric, moreover, may be punished by dismissal from the clerical state."

All of this is to ease people's fears about what we may hear in various media regarding the synod and the pope's magisterial teaching. Nevertheless, we must continue to pray for those at the synod, and for the Church as a whole. In any case, we must keep our focus on our goal: the glory of heaven. Pray. Go to Confession. Receive Holy Communion with great love and devotion. God will reward your charity and perseverance.

In Christ,

Father Amato
